Notes from a Gladiolus Garden

A beautiful gladiolus is a joy indeed but unfortunately there are far too many mediocre varieties and poorly-grown blooms in the gardens of flower growers and in the flower marts. If a great many of our least worthy varieties were discarded and only those having particular merit of beauty, form and color were retained, a great impetus to gladiolus growing would result. We feel that every bulb grower who offers these least worthy varieties to the public is doing more harm than good to the future of gladiolus growing.

During the 1934 season we limited our plantings to 75 varieties, of which nearly half were new, highly advertised introductions. Out of the lot of 35 new kinds, we consider only three improvements over some of our older varieties, and are, therefore, listing them. Our list of varieties is shorter than we have ever offered but all the kinds listed are outstanding in their particular color class. We have retained no weak performers, freakish, blotched nondescripts or moderately pretty kinds. Except for the three varieties—Apricot Glow, Giant Nymph and Golden Dream—we consider all these varieties real aristocrats. We have retained Apricot Glow because of its excellent performance and daintiness of color and form. There are several prettier pinks than Giant Nymph, but no moderate-priced pink outranks it in performance and size. Golden Dream is not the last word in yellow, but it is the best commercial yellow.

Large bulbs are relatively higher in price this season since the drought of last summer decreased the yield of large bulbs in the principal gladiolus sections of the country. We had plenty of rain and our stock is of good size, clean, bright and vigorous. We exercise the greatest care to keep varieties entirely true to name.

1936 PRICES

(Supplement to 1935 price list)

Having a supply of last year's price lists on hand, we are saving the expense of printing a new one. This saving will be passed on to our customers in reduced prices for bulbs. Prices for BAGDAD, DEBONAIR, LINDESTA and PICARDY are 50% OF 1935 PRICES. ALL OTHERS REDUCED 10%, except for Special Picardy, Labeled Collections and Exhibition Mixture. We are not able to reduce these and prepay delivery charges.

We are also listing Mildred Louise, Rideau and Wasaga at 15c each, 2 for 25c—Large size bulbs. These and other new varieties will be included in our 1936 special labeled collection for home gardens, 100 bulbs for $2.50, prepaid.
